Residence, 1900. Andrew Agnew 1905-1925. SE corner of Rucker & 23rd. Remodelled. Built around the turn of the century. A.J. Agnew residence in 1900 Polk's. See Survey. Hardware store proprietor Agnew built his Rucker Av home at the turn of the century (1899). He lived there from 1900 to 1925. It has been moderately altered and renovated. A vernacular adaptation of the Classic Revival-Square Box style. Note the unique central frontispiece with a classic porch. Cross gables have triangular pedimented ends. The square floor plan, large informal mass, and two and a half stories are attributes of the square box style.

(1838-1922) Residence from 1895 until Clark's death in 1922. House built summer and fall of 1895. See Survey. Heide draws plans for new Clark house on Rucker, Herald: 8-1-1895. Details of new Clark house, Herald: 9-26-1895. Clark house to be converted to apartments (4) at cost of $12,000, Herald: 4-18-1927, page 1. Built during the summer and fall of 1895 from plans drawn by A.F. Heide. Clark was an early drygoods merchant in the city whose civic spirit and optimism gained him a special place in the hearts of his fellow citizens. Since the demolition of the Clark Building at Hewitt and Wetmore, the Clark residence is the only building in the city with close historical association with this important local figure. He resided there from 1895 to 1922. Queen Anne style mansion. Architectural parts include an imposing conical turret, front and side classic porticos, balustraded balconies, cross gables and bays.

(Ex-Governor of MN, made and lost fortune in timber there before moving to Everett where he became patriarch of timber industry. President of Clark-Nickerson Lumber Co and Clough-Hartley Co. Future Governor Roland Hartley boarded here from 1905 to 1908. Clough resided here from 1905-1910.) Resided, 1905-1920. Roland Hartley boarded here. Fine house in rough condition, 1977. See Survey. Hartley lived in this house as a boarder, 1905-1908. See Herald, 8-8-1925, page 8. House built in 1898 for $23,000. Made into 'Lucerne Apartments' by Dr. Beatty.

Built turn of the century, 1901. See Survey. The home of mill owner Herbert Clough was built shortly after the turn of the century in a style reminiscent of a Bavarian cottage. Clough was assistant general manager of the Clark-Nickerson Lumber Company and Secretary-Treasurer of the Clough-Hartley Company. This is a Colonial Revival bungalow inflated under a contorted and brooding roof, the most eccentric house in the district. A complex roofline of 'heavy' cross-gables, clipped gables, wide eaves, recessed porch with classic columns.

(President of the Clough Lumber Company until 1939) Residence 1925. Date of construction: circa 1925. SW corner of 10th & Hoyt Av. First Polk's entry at this address is 1922. Bailey addition 18-29-5, Block 215, Lots 17-22. Bailey addition plotted June 1918. A vernacular adaptation of Classic Revival style with classic recessed porch, symmetrical multiple fenestration, a unique shed roof dormer with gables at each end and row windows, half-round windows, "T" shaped floor plan, and a medium-pitched gable roof.

House completed about 1906 for the Denneys. See Survey. See Tribune, January 27, 1912. Conflict: House for Stevenson 1912 at this address? Judge John Denney was among the first prominent citizens to take up residence on Rucker Hill after the Rucker brothers built their mansion. This well maintained home is one of the purest examples of the Classic Square box style in the Rucker Hill neighborhood. The front entry has been embellished with a classical-style portico supporting a second story balustrated balcony. The traditional double hung windows remain intact. A rear one-story addition is compatible with the overall design.

It was built in 1893 at a cost of $1600. Heide, with his partner Charles Hove, was architect for the Rockefeller interests during the boom period and continued after the turn of the century to design many of the major buildings in the city. This was his residence from 1893 to 1905. A vernacular adaptation of the Classic Revival style. Note the recessed porch with classic columns atop 'heavy' wooden piers, the steeply-pitched cross-gable roof with pedimented gable ends, and a unique window surround and mullion on the second story. In excellent condition. Also has the character of N.W. Stick and Shingle style. Altered rear of building

(Architect) Residence in 1900 directory. Built 1893. See Survey. The residence of architect William Moller was built in 1893, an example of simple shingle style domestic designs of the 1890's. It has deteriorated somewhat but appears to be largely intact. Moller and his partnet C. Ferris White designed Jefferson School for the city in 1893 and Moller was serving as supervising architect under James Stephen during the construction of Washington School at the time of his death in 1907.

Residence built circa 1892, residing there by August 4, 1892. See Herald article of that date. Listed in Polk's at this address in 1893 (as east side of Rockefeller Av, south of Pacific), 1894-1895 as Rockefeller Av south of Pacific) and 1900 as 3113 Rockefeller; 1900 as 3113 Rockefeller; 1901 (same); not listed 1902-1905, then back in town as The Cascade Club resident. Also, C.C. Bell at this residence in 1900 directory.
Born in MA 1835, arr 1891; one of the founding fathers of Everett; one of the first councilmen in Everett; chairman of Republican Co Central Committee; 1899 elected Secretary of State, serving until 1909; built this home at 2115 Colby Av, where he lived until his death in 1913; purported to have singlehandedly promoted the State's doubling of population as Sec. of State's Office; responsible for creating the position of Insurance Commissioner. Built the home. Lizzie A. Riley residence in 1932. Purchased by Clarence Swan in 1934. An excellent example of the bungalow style. Typical are the bracketed gable ends, the medium pitched gable roof with shed roof dormers, overhanging eaves and verges with exposed rafters, and an open front porch with plain wood columns atop side bays, oak front door, wrought iron porch railing, and dentils that separate the first and second floor. date of construction: 1909

In charge of J.J.Hill's Everett Improvement Company, McChesnet was important in shaping the city. McChesnet resided here from 1900 to 1924. A unique vernacular style residence, note the unusual shed roof row window dormer on the steeply pitched roof. The symmetrical fenestration has decorative louvered shutters and the window sashes are multipaned.

Residence until 1925. Built about 1910-1913. See Survey, page 35. Contractor was Hans Solie-- see "Deep Roots", page 21. This large home at 32nd and Hoyt was built for clothing store proprietor Norman about 1913. Norman was not only an active businessman, he was deeply involved in Norwegian Community activities. He served as president of Everett's Norwegian male chorus and was responsible for bringing the first 'Sangerfest' (Norwegian choral convention) ever held on the Pacific Coast to Everett in 1903. He lived here until his death in 1925. While most Classic Revival houses tend to be square or wide in plan with pedimented gable ends and painted white, this vernacular adaptation of this style does have the traditional front entry portico supported by classic-style columns, and unique decorative gable roof dormers. However, the original first story double hung windows have been replaced with fixed single sash variety, the front portico has been subject to incompatible alteration, and asphalt shingled siding has been applied on the entire exterior.

Everett Herald: 6-5-37, Article with before and after pictures of exterior remodelling. The home of prominent contractor Henry Raborn on Hoyt Av until some time before 1900. Built in 1892, is an unusual case of a building that has suffered more on the outside than on the inside. Still a distinctive structure, the Raborn house features monogrammed woodwork inside and an interesting tower. Its status as an important local rsidence of the initial boom is impaired by the renovated exterior and the lack of builder's photos or similiar material to guide a restoration attempt. With a roof imitating the thatched cottages of England, the home of Realtor Spriestersbach dates from 1923. During his years in Everett, he built and sold over three hundred houses, many of them the classic bungalows in the Rucker Hill District. See Survey.
Built 1905. Architect: Benjamin Turnbull. Realtor Spreisersbach lived here until 1920's when he moved to Rucker Hill. See Survey. It has been considerable modified but still features some interesting leaded glass. A narrow rectangular 'builder' style, distinguished by a pronounced stringcourse that separates the first and second stories. Large in mass and form, with a hip roof and hip roof dormers, and side bay windows.

Built 1891-1892 for William Swalwell. Architect: F.A. Sexton. Two small cottages built side by side on Pine St by the Swalwell family late in 1891 were among the earliest residential structures of the Rockefeller boom. Only one of these has survived. The cottage has been painted and repaired but remains very much intact. It is not only the most architecturally unaltered residence associated with the Swalwell family in Everett, it is a fine example of shingle style homes of the period. W.H. Stevens was in residence by the 1900 directory. Residence of D.M. Talbot in 1905 directory.
House built (completed) May 1892. Swalwell's listed in residence in both 1905 & 1920 directories. Now (1977) Karma Clinic. See Survey. Helen Hatch (Teacher) residing here 1900 directory. M.A. Madden employed here, 1900 directory. W.G. Swalwell residing here 1900 directory and until 1914. At that time he was president of the Swalwell Land, Loan & Trust Company and the Moffat & McGregor Logging Company. This home has been greatly altered, divested of its porch, resided and otherwise modified, but remains the single building most intimately connected with this important figure. Swalwell was responsible for platting and developing most of the east side of the present city of Everett during the Rockefeller boom. An excellent builder's photo of the house exists making accurate restoration of the structure a definite possibility.
Residence, 1915. Water hook up, April 12, 1912. Eslie Q. Walton residence, 1915-1920. Frederick Baker residence, 1915. Now, Marlborough Apartments. Built in 1912 with classic lines and exceptional craftsmanship, this is a perfect example of multi-family living of another era. The apartments were often home to Everett teachers and a retirement place for many of Everett's prominent citizens.
